Chae,

You have the option of listening in by phone, so you don't have to spare the travel time to Lacey in addition to the meeting itself. However, I really hope you can spare the time to hear about this permit and the details of the temperature credits because that will be the model from which we will be working on the regional trading approach. The good news is it is still three weeks away, so perhaps some of the pressure will be off by then.

I would prefer not to do that. In fact, I am wondering if I am not critical to this particular meeting, I could sure use the time. I am feeling buried lately.

Subject: Quick question re: March 18 water quality trading meeting

I was asked by the organizers of the meeting if those of us in Seattle would be willing to attend at Ecology's building in Lacey, and keep the meeting time of 1-4 pm the same. The ODEQ folks are worried about getting back to Portland at a decent hour. However, I know that then shifts the traffic burden to us.

Seattle folks: please let me know if you would be willing to drive to Lacey for the meeting (we would go in one vehicle), so we would probably have to leave by 11:45 am and return at 5:30 pm or so.

Thanks!
